Treaties are About the Future

Kevin Lamoureux for The Frank & Kevin Show: In Colour!
with Jamie Wilson, Treaty Relations Commissioner of Manitoba

“Treaties are as much about the future as they are about our past.” James Wilson, the Treaty Relations Commissioner of Manitoba (TRCM), every once in awhile. If I were to take these concerns to the bank that holds my mortgage and explained to them that the contract we both signed in good faith was no longer part of the answer to these challenges may be found in the fulfillment of those original treaty promises. Education is the key. Education is how we create new generations of activists who will continue to be Idle No More. Education is how we create the political will to ensure that those promises of prosperity and wellness for all are fulfilled.

The TRCM (www.trcm.ca) has an amazing collection of resources, speakers and media that can help teachers introduce this fascinating, engaging, and compelling topic of treaty education to students of all ages.

For a funny and frank discussion of treaty education with Kevin Wilson, listen to the Frank and Kevin Show: In Colour! online at www.FrankandKevin.podbean.com. Subscribe for free on iTunes, find us on Facebook and on Twitter @FrankandKevin.

Large elements of aboriginal Canada live intellectually in a dream palace, a more comfortable place than where they actually reside.

Inside the dream palace, there are self-reliant, self-sustaining communities – “nations,” indeed – with the full panoply of sovereign capacities and the “rights” that go with sovereignty. These “nations” are the descendants of proud ancestors who, centuries ago, spread across certain territories before and, for some period, after the “settlers” arrived.

“If it were possible to gather in all the Indian children and retain them for a certain period, there would be produced a generation of English-speaking Indians, accustomed to the ways of civilized life, which might then be the dominant body among themselves, capable of holding its own with its white neighbours, and thus would be brought about rapidly decreasing expenditure until the same should forever cease, and the Indian problem would have been solved.”

Kevin Chief talks about attack on bridge

Manitoba cabinet minister describes attack 1:46

Kevin Chief recounts attack 5:48

As a passionate lifelong North Ender, Winnipeg MLA Kevin Chief has sometimes fought against the negative perception of the community.

But last week, the provincial minister of children and youth opportunities went through the type of ordeal that has contributed to that reputation.

He was the victim of a vicious attack at the hands of four people as he jogged across the Slaw Rebchuk Bridge on Feb. 24.

Report urges residential school history classes

20 recommendations call for education, mental health support

CBC News Posted: Feb 23, 2012 4:04 PM CST | Last Updated: Feb 23, 2012 8:45 PM CST 422

Commissioners Chief Wilton Littlechild, Justice Murray Sinclair and Marie Wilson, left to right, listen to testimonies as the Truth and Reconciliation Commission holds its third round of national hearings in Halifax on Oct. 29, 2011. (Canadian Press)

I am getting sick and tired of this.
Enough already! How many more years are Aboriginals going to bleed this issue to death to maintain White Man's guilt? The cult of victimization appears to pay off really well.

* * * * *

Not this again....
"The commission calls for all provinces and territories to develop residential school education materials for public schools."
Why, so our children will always feel guilty for things they never did? Time to lay this one to rest.

* * * * *

If all of these recommendations are implemented, then the spirit of the taxpayer will be officially broken.
Please, just integrate, it's time to move on.
